Stephen “JR” Reynolds

Reynolds, a native of Central City, Kentucky, played basketball at Southeastern from 1999 to 2001. He was All-Region and All-Conference during his time with the Falcons.

When asked about his memories of Southeastern, JR replied: “There is no question the desire to become a head coach was because of working with both of the Franklins, Greg and Todd.”

After his playing career at SIC, JR transferred to Eastern Illinois University in Charleston. There, he was a senior captain and the second leading scorer. He served on the NCAA Student-Athlete Advisory Committee while participating at EIU. He earned his bachelor’s degree in economics from EIU.

JR returned to SIC to serve as the head softball coach and the assistant men’s basketball coach for three years. He has also served as the junior varsity basketball coach at Lehman High School. Currently, he is a graduate assistant with the Purdue University Men’s Basketball Team.

JR is the proud father of 4-year-old son, Jaydon.
