Former Falcons Wed!

Kyle Oldham, a three-point specialist for the Southeastern Illinois College men’s basketball team, and Stephanie McSparin, a powerful force at the forward and center positions for the Southeastern Illinois College women’s basketball team, were united in holy matrimony this summer.

Kyle was a red-shirt during the 2005-06 season and played during the 2006-07 and 2007-08 seasons under coach Todd Franklin. Stephanie played during the 2007-08 season under coach Greg Franklin. Were it not for Kyle’s decision to sit out a year and work on his game, he might never have met the love of his life, Stephanie. But fate intervened, and the rest, as they say, is history.

After Southeastern, Kyle transferred to Henderson State University. Stephanie left Southeastern after one season when her coach moved on to Mississippi State. She finished one year at John A Logan before transferring to University of Southern Indiana. Throughout it all, the one thing that never changed was their love for each other.

Congratulations and Best Wishes for a long and happy marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Oldham!
